Many NC workers’ deaths go uncounted

RALEIGH

In early 2014, North Carolina Labor Commissioner Cherie Berry had some good news to share: Workplace deaths dropped significantly, with only 23 people having died in accidents on the job in the past year.

It was the smallest annual toll since Berry took office in 2001.

That count, though, captured only a sliver of the tragedies that met workers on the job, a News & Observer investigation shows. The state Department of Labor left out more than 80 fathers, brothers, daughters and neighbors who died while trying to make a living. They were farmers, mechanics, janitors, roofers and painters killed or fatally injured by an unexpected hazard at work.

Protect Workers From The Number One Cause of Workplace Deaths – Distracted Driving

_Distracted driving_ is the number one cause of workplace deaths in the United States. OSHA has partnered with the National Safety Council to call employers’ attention to this issue and urge the adoption of safe driving policies.

Alabama Whistleblower Fired and Sued After Protesting Conditions

By Seth Freed Wessler

A Selma, Alabama, factory worker who was fired, sued and slapped with a restraining order after leading a protest march is in court Wednesday to demand she be allowed to continue her fight for safer working conditions at the auto parts plant.

"I feel like I'm being punished for speaking up," Kimberly King, 50, told NBC on March 17th, the day after she was fired.

USMWF’S HIGHLIGHT OF THE WEEK

Bryan P. Bradley

This week USMWF would like to honor worker, Bryan Bradley he was on the job in September 2011 while working for Revel Casino in Atlantic City, New Jersey. He died when struck by lightning. There are no OSHA updates as of as of January 2013.

This photo was sent in by his widow Carmen Bradley.----My husband was pouring concrete at the Revel Casino when lightning struck the medal bucket he was handling. He died as a result of that lightning strike. Losing him has left a terrible void in our hearts that can never be filled. We will miss and love him for the rest of our days.
